A VISIT TO MONTEREY, CALIFORNIA.

A description of Monterey and its surroundings may be of some interest to your readers, especially to those who contemplate a visit there with the excursion party that starts from this city on the 17th of this month. Monterey was founded 110 years ago by the Franciscan missionaries, whose landmarks of civilization dot the Pacific Coast here and there, from the Mexican border to San Francisco. It was the first capital of California, and has always enjoyed, among old Californians, the reputation of being the healthiest and most delightful spot in their state. There are many attractions in the old town, such, for instance, as the old Block House and fort, the old custom house, calabozo and commissariat, Catholic Church, cemetery, and whaling and fishing ponds. The Catholic Church was built nearly 100 years ago, and is constructed of fine white stone; the altar is the work of an Italian, and is regarded as a fine piece of art; there are also life-size paintings of the saints, and other paintings of great age and beauty. There is probably no other place upon the Pacific Coast so replete with natural charms as Monterey. Its exquisite beauty and variety of scenery are diversified with ocean, bay, lake and streamlet; mountain, hill and valley, and groves of oak, cypress, spruce, pine and other trees. That which will quickest engage the observation of the visitor is the pine-fringed slope near town, and the grove that surrounds the large and beautiful Hotel del Monte. Cypress Point, says some writer, is the one spot more perfectly adapted than any other point in the state for picnics and camping out. Start out along the Carmel road, and take the path through the woods; climb the hills, and, resting on the flower-bedded turf, surrounded by ferns and groves, take in the view. Down the wooded slope, carpeted with a profusion of flowers of all colors under the sun, the brown, barren-looking mountains of the Salinas plain rising and falling like an immense sea of motionless billows, with here and there a bright emerald patch of some small well-tilled farm shining like a rough-set jewel. The stern and sombre Gabilan range, with its serrated ridges and dark clusters of pine woods, mellowed down with a filmy haze enshrouding its base. On our left, the beautiful blue waters of the Bay of Monterey, as smooth as a lake, crescented with the lofty Santa Cruz range, its pine feathered ridges, the white sand upon which the milk-white foam creeps and crawls with a sinuous motion like some huge leviathan of the deep. The azure heavens, flecked with clouds—the whole panorama is one which the all-souled artist loves to paint. Surely the "Naples of the New World" is the Bay of Monterey. We go on and now enter a well-shaded road, and catch charming glimpses here and there of the grand old Carmel range, and then suddenly there bursts upon our enraptured sight a panorama of sky, ocean and woods. The broad Pacific is only distinguished from the heavens above it by its glittering sheen as the sunlight plays upon its heaving breast. Here and there, a little snowflake of foam dances on the molten surface as one billow, more playful than the rest, shakes its snowy crest, or the white sails of a ship appear, as swan-like she glides along the water; the weird forest, with its gaunt, ghost-like, black pines, moaning in harmony with the ceaseless roar of the waves as the breeze plays through the branches. Enter the forest, and as you pass through the flowery glades the fragrance of the shrubs and the songs of the birds fall pleasantly on the senses. Pass on, and crossing an open space of green turf, startling the rabbits and quail, we enter another grove, the sun-flecks through the moss-hung and bearded trees, creating a pleasant, subdued light, such as is met with in the ancient minsters and Moorish alcazars of Europe. An involuntary thrill of delight runs through one, and from the storehouse of the mind rushes a flood of memory of childhood's days, with its ancient legend of enchanted groves and faires. A few steps further and the mystical grove is reached and crossed, and we gaze with rapture at the beauty of the sea. The craggy spires jet out into the ocean, and the playful breakers as they dash upon them send aloft showers of spray white as driven snow, while the sunlight shines through the bright green billows as they curl and dash along in their impetuous, never ending race. At our feet the silvery crystal sands are sprinkled with abalone shells, sea urchins, and the varied colors of the sea mosses. Little pools team with marine life, forming perfect aquaria, and the broad Pacific sweeps on in its uncontrollable course, bearing upon its bosom the wealth of empires. Cross the point through the woody glades, toward Point Pinos, passing pretty bays with white crystal sands and shelving beaches. Here the billows charge in with a greater impetuosity, but well inland they break in a creamy ripple at the foot of the green-patched sand dunes. The black pines from which the point was named 300 years ago, almost skirt the water. The mountains of Santa Cruz bound the view. The many-plumed sea birds flit by, and the sea lions dive under the foaming billows. Stay and watch the setting sun, gild the trees and cast a golden haze upon the swelling waters, and then ride home through the moonlit groves, and if your trip to Monterey and Cypress Point has not been a happy one blame yourself, for possibly you may have forgotten that

"He who joy would win
Must share it—happiness was born a twin."
O. H. Riegs.

Grant.
